Twitter reportedly blocked an advertisement campaign run by the Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, a move that has been criticized by Amnesty International and progressive Jewish organizations. "We were told by Twitter that their decision was based on a very broad interpretation of the company's policies," said the Israel Democracy Institute on Monday, in reference to a "Twitter" ad featuring Netanyahu's selfie. "The policies refer to a specific Israeli policy on the Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions movement, and Netanyahu's selfie does not fit in," said Michal Biran, director of the Israeli Democracy Institute.
